Initiative: Citizen Participation Project

Faced with the challenge of establishing more open, transparent, participatory and inclusive models of governance, the Madrid City Council established the Citizen Participation Project. The project, an online platform housed on the Madrid Government website, aims to enhance citizen participation and discussion by providing a channel through which people can directly and individually raise their ideas and needs and propose public services needed to meet them. The proposals published on the platform have a space for discussion which is open to all citizens to exchange views, discuss their needs and improve them. Since 2015, 362,702 users have registered and participated in more than 5,000 debates, while more than 21,000 proposals have been made and more than 4 million votes generated.
